

*International Comparisons of Taxation in Developing Countries
2004*

Keio University
Faculty of Business and Commerce

International Comparisons of Taxation in Developing Countries 2004

This study tries to compare economic environments, fiscal positions, tax systems, tax administration and prospects in tax reform in selected developing countries, namely, Malaysia, Uzbekistan, Egypt, Nigeria and Venezuela.

In so doing, we can identify common needs in tax reform such as tax-bare broadening, simplifying tax schedule, neutralizing tax burden, efficiency and equity improving.

At the same time, country-specific issues vary from country to country. They reflect different stages of development in respective countries.

Members of this study consists of

Yukinobu Kitamura	Keio University, Faculty of Business and Commerce
Edith Mason	Keio University, Graduate Student
Nazarali Ibodullaevich Norbaev	Keio University, Graduate Student
Hany Fathey Abdelmohimen	Keio University, Graduate Student
Razaq Lawal-Aluko	Keio University, Graduate Student
Manuel Jose Oropeza Venegas	Keio University, Graduate Student

Contents

	Introduction	vii
<hr/>
1.	Malaysia Edith Mason	1
2.	Uzbekistan Nazarali Ibodullaevich Norbaev	33
3.	Egypt Hany Fathey Abdelmohimen	73
4.	Nigeria Razaq Lawal-Aluko	117
5.	Venezuela Manuel Jose Oropeza Venegas	147

Introduction

This study tries to compare economic environments, technical assistance in fiscal policy and tax administration in selected developing countries; Malaysia, Uzbekistan, Egypt, Nigeria and Venezuela.

Individual country chapter shares basically the same organizational framework.

- I. Introduction
- II. Macroeconomic Activity
  - A. International Environment
  - B. Domestic Environment
  - C. Fiscal Position
- III. Tax System
- IV. Country-Specific Issues
- V. Summary and Conclusion

In so doing, we can compare countries on the same issues, identify similarities and difference and highlight country-specific issues.

Individual country chapter is written by a tax expert of respective country. It contains valuable statistical and policy information. Individual chapters, then, are compiled and edited by Yukinobu Kitamura.